Armando Choy, Gustavo Chui and Moisés Sío Wong are three Chinese-Cubans who as young rebels participated in the 1956–58 Cuban revolution that brought down the Batista dictatorship. Our History is Still Being Written, published by Pathfinder Press, tells their story. All three became generals in Cuba's army, helped lead 375,000 Cuban volunteers in the sixteen year long internationalist mission in Angola whose highlight was the 1988 defeat of the invading South African apartheid army. They play leadership roles in Cuba today.

The significance of Chinese immigration into Cuba, starting in the 19th Century, is discussed in the book. Cuba's Spanish rulers transported over 150,000 Chinese peasants, in brutal conditions, to work as indentured labourers - virtual slaves - in the sugar industry. Thousands of them fought to free Cuba of Spanish colonial rule and later in the 1956-58 revolution. The three generals explain that it was through Cuba's socialist revolution that "discrimination—against blacks, against Chinese, against women, against the poor—was ended."

Meeting Sponsors: Confucius Institute for Scotland; Pathfinder Books, Edinburgh; Edinburgh University Chinese Students Association; a Black History Month event.
